About The Leadership Archetype Questionnaire

The Leadership Archetype Questionnaire (LAQ™) is based on the belief that an individualistic notion of leadership is inadequate, given the increased complexity of the work environment. Although the "Great Man or Woman" theories still linger, most scholars of leadership now recognise that successful organisations are characterised by a distributive, collective, complementary form of leadership. To further explore this form of leadership, eight leadership archetypes have been defined:

- Strategist
- Change-catalyst
- Transactor
- Builder
- Innovator
- Processor
- Coach
- Communicator

These archetypes are representations of ways of leading in the complex organisational environment. They are prototypes that provide us with models for understanding leadership behavior. By completing the LAQ™ leaders should be able to identify their role in their team.

Interpreting the Results

When helping leaders interpret the results of the LAQ™, and determining what to make of those results, keep the following in mind:

- The variances among the scores of the observers and the scores of the participants can be very revealing, showing the different ways the participants can appear to different people.

- The LAQ™ results are based on the perceptions of an individual and his or her observers at a single point in time. Although individuals may "drift" toward one particular archetype, it is more common for a person to possess characteristics of a number of archetypes. Usually, leaders who have mastered a number of styles (revealed by high scores) will be more effective in the organisation.

- Leadership behaviour is a highly complex process in which many factors play a part, and a leadership archetype is an outcome of an interactive process between the individual and the environment. Archetypes can change as our life changes.

- Serious discontinuities in the organisation, such as restructuring or a merger, can affect the way a participant will be scored by others. Such discontinuities may also create a different organisational context for the team, necessitating a new leadership role constellation to make the team effective.

For more information on the development and validation of the LAQ™, please refer to Kets de Vries, M. Vrignaud, P., Agrawal, A. and Florent-Treacy E. (2009). Development and Application of the Leadership Archetype Questionnaire, Journal of Human Resource Management.

Understanding the Dimensions

The Strategist: Leadership as a Game of Chess

Strategists function best in turbulent times, when changes in the environment necessitate new directions. They have a long-term orientation, can see the big picture and plan accordingly. They excel at anticipating future developments in the organisation's environment and are very agile in response to change. Although strategists are very talented, they do not always make the best people managers. Furthermore, despite their talent for aligning vision with strategy, strategists are not always good at aligning strategy with values and behaviour, because this would entail people interventions. The result could lead to interpersonal problems in the organisation.

The Change-Catalyst: Leadership as a Turnaround Activity

Change-catalysts function best in the integration of two organisational cultures after a merger or acquisition or when spearheading re-engineering or turnaround projects. They are also excellent at managing rapidly growing organisational units and recognising opportunities for organisational transformation. They are quick to identify and sell the need for change. They specialise in turning messy situations around and handling ambiguous predicaments. However, change-catalysts can also quickly become bored in stable situations. They need challenging assignments that provide feedback on how well they are doing; otherwise, they may become irritable, difficult to deal with and even depressed.

The Transactor: Leadership as Deal-making

Transactors like making acquisitions or other deals. They constantly identify and tackle new opportunities. Extremely dynamic and enthusiastic, they have considerable adaptive capacity, thriving on new challenges and negotiations. They like novelty, adventure and exploration and have high risk-tolerance. They are driven by the accumulation of wealth. Like change-catalysts, transactors need constant stimulation or they can become very restless, which introduces the risk of their initiating ventures that make little or no economic sense. They can be seduced by the excitement of mergers and takeovers, thus taking other people on a very risky journey.

The Builder: Leadership as an Entrepreneurial Activity

Builders like setting up "skunkworks" (a term sometimes used by engineers or other technicians to describe loosely structured projects primarily for the sake of radical innovation) or other intrapreneurial ventures inside a large organisation. Also, they want to start and build their own organisations. They have a powerful need for independence and to be in control of their lives. However, builders' social skills occasionally leave something to be desired and many have difficulty dealing with authority. They can be too assertive, too dominant, and too controlling, which can make interacting with people who work for them (or with them) difficult.

Understanding the Dimensions

The Innovator: Leadership as Creative Idea Generation

Innovators live in a world of imagination. They are endlessly inventive and always on the lookout for new projects, new activities or new procedures. Free-spirited and imaginative, they lose themselves in solving complex problems. Adept at logic and reason, innovators may not always express their feelings appropriately. They are poor social sensors, unskilled at decoding body language, sensing others' feelings, or recognising hidden agendas, thus making a rather "nerdy" impression. Because of their eccentric behaviour, the subtleties of organisational political life may escape them.

The Processor: Leadership as an Exercise in Efficiency

Processors like to create order out of disorder. They excel at turning organisations into smoothly running, well-oiled machines, and they are particularly adept at helping organisations to make an effective transition from an entrepreneurial to a more professionally-managed stage. What may cause many problems for processors is their potential lack of spontaneity. Deviating from the rules makes them anxious. They are followers, not innovators. Although they have no problem handling continuous change, they may find it difficult to cope with discontinuous change. They are not truly visionary.
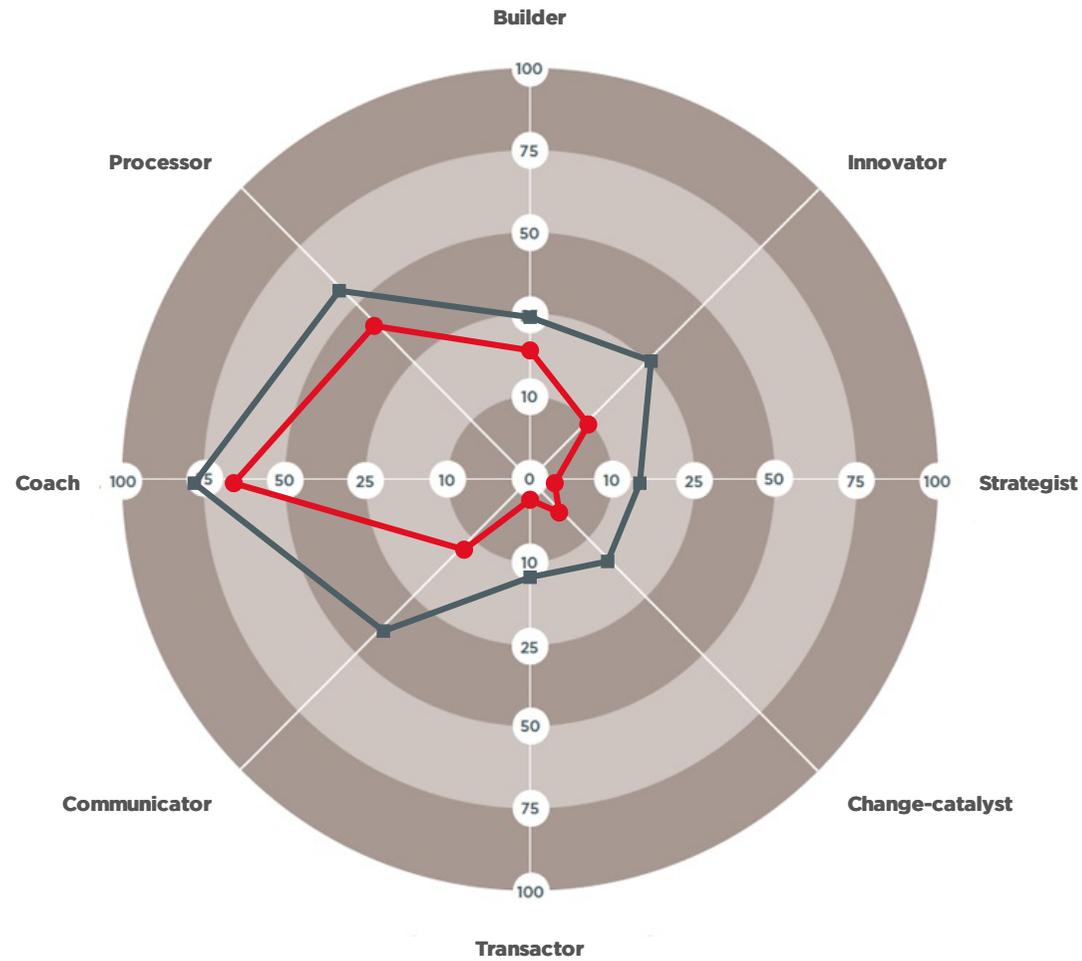

The Coach: Leadership as People Development

Coaches are very good at instituting culture-change projects to address organisational alienation and loss of trust. They are exceptional people developers who possess a lot of empathy; are extremely good listeners; and have high emotional intelligence. With their positive, constructive outlook on life, they inspire confidence and trust. However, coaches are sometimes not tough enough when toughness is needed, and their sensitivity to others' feelings can make them overly careful when giving feedback. They may even avoid telling people about their true performance, in an attempt to preserve the self-esteem of underperformers.

The Communicator: Leadership as Stage Management

Communicators can express a vision strongly and powerfully. They are able to inspire people individually at all levels, and they know how to appeal to other organisational stakeholders. They are good at projecting optimism in times of adversity or crisis and are strongly influential with the various constituencies in the organisation. However, communicators can appear to lack the ability to follow through. When it's time to deliver, very little happens, and everything they have been saying can seem like empty rhetoric.

Coach	• Be ready to play organisational "executioner" – help them to make tough decisions • Encourage them to recognise and deal with underperformance and difficult decisions • Inject a regular dose of reality	• Appreciate their ability to get the best out of people • Encourage them to recognise and deal with underperformance and difficult decisions • Help them to feel comfortable about exerting authority
Communicator	• Assume responsibility for implementation • Trust their instincts • Make sure their exposure to questioning is kept short • Prevent excessive use of external advisors • Pre-empt their tendency to go for quick-fix solutions • Inject a regular dose of reality • Make sure they understand what you expect from them	• Use them in communications roles in crisis situations • Be directive • Create a support system for implementation • Prevent excessive use of external advisors • Watch out for abuse of the system • Make sure your own achievements are recognised by others

KDVI Family of Leadership Development Instruments

The Leadership Archetype Questionnaire is part of a family of leadership development instruments developed over the last decade by Manfred Kets de Vries. These instruments apply different lenses to examine organisational leadership, from individual (personality, individual leadership skills, to motivations and drivers) to teams (leadership roles and role constellations) to organisational (culture). Collectively, they provide a systemic view of leadership effectiveness within the organisation.

The Global Executive Leadership Mirror (GELM®)

The GELM® is an in-depth 360° feedback development tool to measure specific leadership behaviours and provide feedback across four main levels: Self, Teams, Organisation and Networks. It also includes life indicators such as life stressors and well-being resources, and perceived performance to add further insight into an executive's behaviours at work.

The Global Executive Leadership Inventory (GELI)

The GELI is an in-depth 360° feedback development tool for identifying and understanding one's leadership strengths and weaknesses and to explore steps needed to improve ones leadership competencies.

The Personality Audit (PA™)

The PA™ is a 360° feedback instrument to help participants understand their motives for what they do through looking at their key personality traits. It can be used towards an action plan for personal growth and development.

The Inner Theatre Inventory (ITI™)

The ITI™ is a 360° feedback assessment which identifies the drivers in an individual's inner theatre, consisting of the values, beliefs, and attitudes that guide their behaviour. Through the ITI™, individuals can identify the life anchors that drive them, develop greater self-awareness, and develop a lifestyle more congruent with their values and belief systems.

The Leadership Archetype Questionnaire (LAQ™)

The LAQ™ is a 360° feedback assessment designed to help the participants identify his/her salient leadership behaviour through eight leadership archetypes. The assessment of leadership archetypes can help towards identifying an individual's role within a team as well as the roles needed to ensure capable executive leadership in a team.

Organisation

The Organisational Culture Audit (OCA™)

Organisational culture is the foundation upon which an organisation's vision, mission, strategy, and structure are based; it makes up the organisation's uniqueness and identity. The OCA™ provides a comprehensive diagnostic of the current corporate culture as well as a detailed understanding of the culture an organisation are aiming at, by examining employee's perceptions of the organisation's current practices and the values they consider important, and whether they are aligned with corporate strategy.
